WANTS 3,000 BINGLES

Big Tiger Outfielder Is Out After New Record.

Ordinary Hitting in Seasons of 1915 and 1916 Will Send Sam Crawford Under Wire on to Heals of Hans Wagner and Lajoie.

Another couple of seasons will find Detroit in possession of a slugger who will have charge of 3,000 major league base hits—it doesn't take any great amount of baseball knowledge to figure the athlete; there's only one Tiger to whom that honor could go, and that is Sam Crawford.

The big outfielding star has been with Detroit for twelve years. In the seasons of 1904 to 1914 inclusive Crawford made 2,921 hits, an average of slightly better than 184 to a season. Crawford broke into major league baseball in 1899 as a member of the Cincinnati National league team. In about thirty games he made thirty-two hits.

His years as a Tiger and the total of his hits are tabulated thus: 1904, 141; 1905, 227; 1906, 166; 1907, 188; 1908, 177; 1909, 183; 1910, 167; 1911, 217; 1912, 189; 1913, 190; 1914, 182.

The statistics of modern day baseball are somewhat deficient, but figuring that the slugger made an average of 184 hits a season, which he undoubtedly did, it can be found that in the seasons of 1900 to 1903 inclusive he collected 735 safe swats, thus bringing the total for his career to 2,767.

Just ordinary hitting in the seasons of 1915 and 1916 will send "Wahoo Sam" under the wire and on to the heels of Hans Wagner and Larry Lajoie, the only other veterans to reach the mark.

Crawford proposes setting a mark that will stand for all time. He has set upon 3,500 as the total for his hits.

Sam Crawford.

and, reaching this mark, he will just about put up a mark for all hitters to shoot at.

Harry Tuthill, trainer of the team, says Crawford has at least five more years to go as a major league star.

"Unless meeting with an accident, there is no reason why Crawford should not continue playing almost indefinitely," declared Tuthill. "Sam takes better care of himself than any other player in baseball; probably better care of himself than any other man in the country."

"He starts training for a season with the beginning of the year. He eliminates all pastimes from his food-stuff; he doesn't drink at any time; he never smokes during the training season and seldom out of it; he lives regularly, eats regularly, and when a healthy man at the beginning keeps up a life like this there is no reason why he should not continue playing baseball almost as long as he wishes."

"Crawford is an ideal player. He is a player every one looks upon with favor, and he carries the respect of teammates and opposing players. He is easily handled, and when a man carries this record there is nothing to fear."

If Crawford makes good on his hopes the chances favor the creation of a record of more than 3,500 hits.

PLAN POST-WORLD'S SERIES

President Tener Advances Proposition to Have Champions Play Against a Picked Team.

President John K. Tener of the National league advances the attractive proposition to stage a post-world's series on the Pacific coast next fall.

The proposition involves the world's champions against a picked team of the best players in the various leagues.

To say the least this is novel, and it has no doubt it will be extremely taking to the baseball followers on the coast who have little opportunity to see the big fellows in action except during training seasons.

In order to accomplish what President Tener proposes certain legislation will have to be put through the national bodies, but if the rulers are convinced that the meet would be attractive and profitable, there is little doubt that the necessary legislation will be forthcoming.

The people of the Pacific coast are good ball patrons, and I see no reason why a post-series game like this should not be staged for their benefit, especially since it promises ample returns.
